DECISION-MAKING IN EARLY SOBRIETY

by Bill M., Huntington Beach

Webster's definition of "to decide" is: "to arrive at a solution that ends uncertainty, to bring to a definite end, to make a choice or judgement."

When a person enters a drug or alcohol recovery program, some of the first statements they hear are "Stop thinking," "My best judgement got me here," "Don't make decisions." To a newcomer this is ludicrous. "If I'm not supposed to think, how can I make decisions." These statements made to the usually pride and ego-filled addict seem shallow and without hope.

"My God," the newcomer may say, "how can I live without thinking and making decisions??? Life is full of decisions and I must make them. The first decision I'll make is to work this program the way it suits me best, but as for not making decisions, that may be for some, but I'm different."

When an addict reaches demoralization to the point of recognizing something must be done, and that through programs such as Alcoholics Anonymous or hospitals they realize recovery is possible and there is hope. But the hope has rather a superficial basis because that person still lacks an in-depth comprehension of what recovery actually involves.

During the process of becoming chemically dependent, the individual experiences deep emotional learning. He or she experiences an erosion of their value system, isolation, alienation and a tremendous sense of personal inadequacy. The dependent person, by the fact of that dependency, can constantly flee from reality by hiding behind the use of alcohol and drugs. There is a theory that when a person becomes addicted, their emotional growth stops. To this writer, there is logic in that theory, since, when problems arose, we could dissolve ourselves in alcohol or drugs and never have to face the problem. Most problems solve themselves in time, but if an addict is somehow forced to face one, it is usually with angle-shooting, rationalization and a highly inflated ego. This way to decision-making was part of the deep emotional learning referred to above. This learned way must be unlearned.

But does the alcoholic really stop thinking and decision making in early sobriety? Certainly not. This writer feels that the words stated in the beginning - "Don't think," "Don't make decisions" should be replaced with "Don't make decisions that don't have to be made."

The chemically dependent person on initially entering a program of recovery is making fantastic decisions the likes of which he or she has never made before. The decision that they are powerless over alcohol and or drugs, and that this addiction has made their lives unmanageable - this is the first step of A.A. and must be admitted by any addict before any recovery can begin. What happens after that admission is not so much a matter of deciding to stop drinking, but, rather, making a positive choice for

ADOLESCENT SUICIDES CONTINUE TO RISE

During the last 15 years, the number of suicides among young people has tripled. Last year, more than 5,000 adolescents (defined here as 10-19 years of age) committed suicide. This number is a small indication of the real emotional problem. More than 400,000 young people attempted suicide, and the numbers are growing each year.

There are many reasons a young person wishes to end his or her own life. In teenagers, alcohol or drugs are almost always a major factor. In fact, it is rare when drugs or alcohol are not present in the teenage suicide victim.

The adolescent years are now recognized as being extremely stressful. Many new and difficult pressures are placed on a young person's shoulders. There is pressure from parents, families and teachers to achieve, as well as peer pressure from friends and social groups. These stresses produce competitive

DRUNK CYCLING BILL SIGNED

People who ride bicycles while drunk would face fines of up to $250, under a measure signed into law by Gov. Edmund Brown Jr.

The bill, AB1576 by Assemblyman Pat Nolan, R-Glendale, would also apply to people who ride bicycles under the influence of drugs.

Current law already prohibits riding a bicycle on a freeway.

Nolan's bill would make bicyclists subject to certain sections of the California Vehicle Code relating to drunken driving.

demands that are unique to young people. Peer pressure is undoubtedly one of the strongest influences on teenagers. These are some of the strains that can lead to drug abuse and alcoholism.

An adolescent desperately seeks the acceptance of his peers and will drink or take drugs to fit in. After experimenting with alcohol and drugs, most young people will learn to handle their pressures. But there are others who will come to depend on one or both, for self-confidence or a way to fit in. Alcohol and drugs will become an important part of their lives, and they'll be on their early way to the progressive disease of alcoholism and harmful involvement with drugs.

The feelings of worthlessness, hopelessness and despair that come from such diseases can lead to a young person's wish to end his or her life. However, not every suicide victim is an alcoholic or a drug addict.

Research reveals that 95 percent of all suicide victims seek some sort of help directly before the attempt; whether it be professional help from a counselor or therapist, confiding in a close friend, or just mentioning their plans to an acquaintance. Unfortunately, many people don't believe the victim is serious, nor do they recognize that the person is crying out for help until it is too late.

Many people believe that a person who threatens to commit suicide will never go through with it, and is only looking for attention. This is a common fallacy. If someone tells you that they are planning on killing themselves, seek help quickly. These are usually not idle threats.

There are several other warning signals of suicide, the loudest being excessive use of alcohol and/or drugs. Many people do not realize the dangers of mixing two different drugs, or that alcohol in itself is a drug. For example, mixing alcohol with a Qualalude can lead to serious problems, because the sum of these two drugs is potentially more dangerous than the two drugs individually.

Mixed together, two drugs can result in fatal overdose.

Most suicides can be prevented by recognizing the obvious warning signals and acting quickly. A person considering suicide will make statements like: "Nobody cares what happens to me, anyway", or "It doesn't matter what I do"... A person planning on committing suicide will often give away prized objects, possessions that have a great deal of value only to that person. Young people do not usually make out wills, but this is a way of taking care of things, becoming organized. The suicide victim will usually leave a note at the time of death. The notes are filled with guilt, shame, and offer some sort of explanation. There is usually an apology to one or more people the victim cares about.

The object is to recognize these indicators as signs of impending suicide, and find help — fast. All suicide victims want help — most do not want to die at all. They are only looking for relief from their private pain.

The extreme tragedy of a young person who dies as a result of involvement with drugs and alcohol is that this disease is a simply treated one, with help readily available. The Adolescent CAREUN[™] Program is a treatment program designed help young people who are harmfully involved with alcohol and other drugs. The results have been successful and proven effective in maintaining sobriety.

"Throughout the program, emphasis is placed on the finding of identity, admission of problem, alternate behavior and attitudinal patterns, setting of priorities and goals, methods of maintaining sobriety, and the establishment of new patterns of problem solving," said Dr. Edward Carels, psychologist and a vice president of Comprehensive Care Corporation, Newport Beach, CA.

Indeed, a great many factors are involved when a young person takes his or her own life. And very often the cry is one of shock, with comments like: "She was so young, with so much to look forward to", "We gave him a good home, everything money could buy... What more did he want?" People have a difficult time understanding suicide, much less a young person taking his or her own life. And yet in almost every instance the warning signals were there.

Help is available to those young people with a problem with alcohol or drugs. If you or someone you know needs help, call the adolescent CAREUNIT Program, before it's too late.

To find out the nearest program for you, call toll free 1-800-422-4143.

DECISION-MAKING IN EARLY SOBRIETY

sobriety. The choice for sobriety rather than against chemicals is not a matter of semantics... it is an entirely new ballgame. It involves a new kind of commitment - a commitment to a new life.

As was stated earlier, in the process of becoming chemically dependent, the addict realizes an erosion of values. In the process of recovery, those values that have eroded must be re-learned. It takes time and growth. During this growth, new values open to the addict. What has been important in their lives before may become secondary or needless in their lives today. Goals of money, power and prestige which they may have had before possibly won't be as important as they once were. Their idea of companionship and emotional involvement with the type of people they used to be attracted to may change drastically as their program of recovery is pursued and the commitment of a new way of life blossoms.

Until there is a good, solid program, decisions involving the outside - jobs, marriage, etc., should, if possible, be put aside. Quoting Dr. Max Schneider, Chairman of the Orange County chapter of the National Council on Alcoholism, "The newly freed addict can be compared to the newly freed prisoner. Unless there is growth and value-change, the addict or prisoner will regress to the life they have known before and are comfortable with."

"To decide" - to arrive at a solution that ends uncertainty. Does a newly recovering addict really not make decisions, not at all? The decision to end their uncertainty, to change within, are so important that any outside decisions would pale in comparison. Because of the magnitude of the recovery process, addicts' decisions to maintain sobriety and live a joyous life, it is suggested that they not make any other decisions they do not have to make. "Easy does it."

Alcoholism is no respecter of the fair sex, nor of any ethnic, religious, economic or socio-cultural group. It is the equal opportunity disease.

Borrachons beware

Folk Remedy For Alcoholism

Curanderos (folk healers) along the Mexican border frequently use herbal remedies to treat drinking problems. One popular remedy is a seed called "haba de San Ignacio."

In the Journal of Ethnopharmacology, Dr. Robert Trotter notes that the seeds are most often used by wives who are trying to alter the drinking habits of a spouse. Wives buy the seed from an herbalist. The seeds are then roasted, ground into a fine powder and placed in the food or drink that will be consumed by the unsuspecting problem drinker.

When the unwitting "patient" drinks alcohol after eating the seeds, he becomes nauseated and vomits. In theory, folk treatment with haba de San Ignacio is supposed to create an aversion to alcohol.

In practice... well, there's many a slip twixt the cup and the lip. The aversive reaction sometimes misfires. One informant told Dr. Trotter: "Sometimes this remedio works, and the man stops drinking; but other times he stops coming home for dinner."

Alcoholism MAR APR 1982

Of the 100 million persons in this country who drink, one in ten are prone to alcoholism.

50% of all fatal accidents occurring on the roads involve alcohol and half of these involve an alcoholic. There are an estimated 200,000 drinking drivers in Orange County.

Women Gaining Strength in AA

A recent Alcoholic Anonymous survey of United States and Canadian members has revealed marked changes in AA membership. The percentage of women in the sample has risen from 22 to 31 percent since 1968. Moreover, the percentage of women in the portion of the sample who came to AA since 1977 is 34 percent, indicating that the upward trend is continuing. Secondly, the percentage of young people (30 years and younger) in the sample increased from 11.3 percent in 1977 to 14.7 percent in 1980.

Among alcoholics coming to AA since 1977, 27 percent report dual addiction. Also, the percentage of alcoholics who cite counseling and rehabilitation as important in leading them to AA has increased from 19 to 26 percent since 1977.

Finally, at a typical AA meeting, from 35 to 40 percent of attendees have been sober less than one year, roughly the same percentage that has been sober one to five years. Twenty to thirty percent have been sober five years or more. These percentages were similar to those found in 1974 and 1977.

The AA surveys have been conducted every three years since 1968. For more information, or for a free single copy of the survey, write: Box 459, Grand Central Station, New York, NY 10163.

IF YOU HAVE ANY QUESTION, PLEASE CALL OUR OFFICE, 556-4555.

We never like to doubt the sincerity of anyone staying sober. Nor do we like to question their charity. But unless we see actions that are proof of sincerity and charity, when such actions are called for, we have grave doubts.

Just watch the reaction of members in a group ---1)When a new member comes to the meeting; 2)When someone who has slipped returns to the group. Do the members react the same when a gutter bum comes to A.A. as they do when one of the so-called better class shows up? Are they inclined to shy away from someone with whom they would not care to associate socially? Are they snobs who think they belong in the social register because they now wear a tie and clean underwear? We've known a few characters like that, and so have you.

Actually, they're pathetic. Their memory is short, and their gratitude non-existent.

The new member, and the slipper, wants above all to be accepted. Everyone, alcoholic or not, wants to be accepted. Not fawned over, or praised, just be accepted.

He is so utterly lonely; he's been kicked around; nobody would accept him anywhere. He hears about A.A. and it's vaunted tolerance and charity. Wonder what he thinks when he comes to A.A., or comes back to A.A., and finds himself sitting alone in the corner, greeted by few, ignored by most. He may come back a second time, even a third -- and that's about all he can take. Come right down to it, he or she doesn't even expect equality, just a recognition that there's a welcome, a reason to hope, and a chance for acceptance.

Our failure to play square with the new member or the slipper may be due to complacency, laziness or indifference than to outright snobbery. But to that man or woman looking for help, it will still look like we are hypocrites. And we may be closer to that than we think.
